The Future of EAP: Adapt or Die?

KEYNOTE PRESENTATION:

EAP in the 21st century: institutional representations;
pedagogical challenges in the digital age; transnational English

Professor Joan Turner (Emeritus, Goldsmiths)

The English Language Centre, Goldsmiths, University of London is holding a one day PIM on Saturday 9 November 2019. As the English Language Centre celebrates 30 years of EAP activity, this PIM aims to look at the future of EAP and what the likely issues and practitioner responses will be in the next 30 years.

The challenges and opportunities are many. From Higher Education expectations to the views of the teaching profession, from changing student expectations to evolving perceptions of 'the classroom', from artificial intelligence to the academic skills agenda, what are the key factors that are shaping our destiny and how are we to respond?

Proposals for presentations and workshops are invited. Drawing on the themes from the keynote, these may relate to the following 5 strands:

- EAP Centres within a changing Higher Education context
- The Technological Turn and its impact on EAP
- Academic literacies in transnational contexts
- EAP and the 'Creative Economy' (the Augar Review)
- Creative responses to contemporary challenges

Presentation sessions will be scheduled for 30 minutes. Workshops will be scheduled for 30 or 60 minutes.

Proposals of 250 words should be sent to Conrad Heyns/Marl'ene Edwin, Conference Organisers (goldpim@baleap.org) on the attached proposal form. Deadline for abstracts – Friday 27 September 2019.
